Bullying, Harassing, and Stalking
Don’t Just Happen…They Can Be Prevented

Prevention of domestic and sexual abuse is an important part of Susan B. Anthony Project’s mission. Every day, our community educators are in schools teaching children:

• How to resolve conflicts without hitting
• That it is not okay to tease and bully
• That there’s a big difference between joking and sexual harassment
• When you’re in a healthy relationship, one person does not have power and control over the other person
• Cyber-bullying—using phones, computers, and social networking to stalk, harass, monitor, and control another person — is not acceptable

Middle school students’ comments after a presentation on popularity and bullying:

“You’re changing the way people around here think. People have been talking about it all day. I couldn’t wait to get to class to check it out.”

“I liked the presentation because I learned a lot about respecting. I learned not to bully and not to worry about popularity. This will be useful to me in the future because of the way I treat others and make friends.”

A high school student’s comment after a presentation on self esteem:

“I learned to love myself and to love others for who they are.”

Last year, 4,463 children in 42 schools participated in SBAP prevention programs.

What can you do?

• Invite our community educators into your school, church, scout troop, or other gathering to teach your children about healthy and unhealthy relationships.
• Call community educators Gina or Colleen at 860-489-3798 to schedule a program.
